AP OUTERWEAR

We have gone the 'extra mile' to bring you this range of top quality AP Outer Wear. To create this range, we've used only top quality fabrics combined with expert workmanship to bring these retail influenced styles.

What does "WP" "BP" mean?

Fabric manufacturers typically describe the waterproof breathability of fabrics using two numbers.

The first is in millimeters (mm) and is a measure of how waterproof a fabric is. In the case of a 5k or 5,000 mm fabric, if you put a square tube with inner dimensions of 2.5cm x 2.5cm over a piece of fabric, you could fill it with water to a height of 5,000 mm before water would begin to leak through. The higher the number, the more waterproof the fabric.

The second number is a measure of how breathable the fabric is - this is normally expressed in terms of how many grams (g) of water vapor can pass through a square meter (m²) of the fabric from the inside to the outside in a 24 hour period. In the case of a 5k (5,000g) fabric, this would be 5,000 grams. The higher the number, the more breathable the fabric is.

MENS PANTS

1800 / flat front 1801 / pleated

The new classic Flat Front cut mens pant features a flat front to make your silhouette appear more smooth and straight. In flat front pants, the material lies flat and should be worn on the hips but they do have to fit you perfectly.

65% polyester/35% viscose

Pleats are creases on the front of the pants where the material is folded and sewed before it is attached to the waistband.

The pleated pants are worn on the waist, just above your hip bone, which means pleated pants have a higher rise making them more generous in the middle. They will give you more freedom of movement and you will feel more comfortable.

HOW TO measure

choose your favourite fitting shirt and grab a tape measure or ruler.

TIP: don't use a polo, tee or singlet to measure with because they stretch more than a woven shirt does.

STEP 2

lay it down on a flat surface with the arms extended and smooth it flat.

TIP: make sure no-one is wearing it.

STEP 3

measure down 2.5cm from where the arm is sewn onto the body, give yourself a 'mark'.

TIP: don't use a pen or marker, just make a light indentation in the fabric with your fingernail.

STEP 4

half chest measurement
Use this 'mark' you have just made and then measure across the front of the shirt from seam to seam.

TIP: only measure the front, that's why it's called a half chest measurement.

STEP 5

refer to sizing tables in this catalogue or Online www.aussiepacific.com.au to match your half chest measurement to the Sizing Table.

TIP: do the measure up more than once in case you misread the numbers.

STEP 6

compare and consider
If your half chest measurement is 59cm then go to the shirt style you are considering and determine where 59 sits on the size chart.

TIP: If you come in at 59cm, then consider going to an L at 60.5cm

CORPORATE RESPONSIBILITY 2018

AUSSIE PACIFIC TAKES AND CONSIDERS THE ISSUE OF SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY VERY SERIOUSLY

Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) is a form of corporate self regulation integrated into a business model. CSR is also known as corporate conscience, social performance or sustainable responsible business.

Aussie Pacific offers innovative products and services while conserving, protecting and enhancing resources. To do this, Aussie Pacific's CSR Policy functions as a built in self regulating mechanism to monitor and ensure an active compliance within the spirit of the law and also ethical standards.

The goal of the Aussie Pacific CSR is to embrace and enhance responsibility for the company's actions and to encourage a positive impact through our activities on the environment, our consumers, our employee communities, our stakeholders and our valued clients.

CSR is a non-binding principle that has received status in relation to both private and corporate sectors particularly in relation to workers conditions and the use of under age or child labour.

Our objective is to provide a set of requirements that when effectively implemented provides full confidence that we consistently provide goods and services that meet your ethical needs and quality expectations and comply with all necessary regulations both in China and Australia.

The factory falls under the ISO (ISO:9001) umbrella which is an international standard that gives requirement for an organisation's quality management system.

Aussie Pacific does this in well managed factories. There is no forced, under age or child labour used in the manufacture of these retail quality garments. Workers rights and entitlements are also at the fore front as you would expect because Aussie Pacific is an Australian owned and operated company.

SUBLYM

Dye Sublimation is a process for printing by injecting colour and imagination into fabric. Chances are you have seen, sublimated fabrics. Industries such as sports, events and fashion rely heavily on this particular style.

Not creative? That's okay! It's easy to approach trained professionals who will use their expertise to get your unique design out of your head and into fabric. Alternatively, jump online and try design your own dye sublimated apparel at aussieapacific.com.au, then take your design to a professional to custom make your garment for a minimum of only 10 pieces (Styles apply).

With Dye Sublimation the graphics are computer generated and transferred by printing to dye sublimated paper using specialised inks which are then transferred through heat and pressure into the fabric to give you a unique piece of clothing with the image or pattern embedded forever.

The printed image can be all over from seam to seam, will not fade, crack or fall off.

Dye Sub can only be done successfully on 100% Polyester fabrics. This process ensures that the graphics are permanent (never losing any detail or vibrancy), whilst the moisture removal and anti-bacterial properties of the garment remain unchanged.

Dye Sublimated sports uniforms and apparel are popular as you can uniquely have any logo designs, patterns, numbers, names or sponsors printed onto your garments permanently using a fantastic range of colours and artistic techniques.

Depending on individual client needs, we have a variety of different fabrics at our disposal to create the perfect sports uniform, promotional gear, corporate wear or retail garment.

Aussie Pacific garment designers have taken into account the many different methods of decorating or monogramming apparel. Here we look at the three main methods of decoration yet there are others such as Digitally Printed transfers and Screen Printed transfers.

Your Brand should be synonymous with a quality garment, so it makes sense to want to control the way your Brand is portrayed.

Today, any decoration goes on anything, a far change from the not too distant days where a small chest print or embroidery was the norm. Splash prints, tone on tone, print/emb. combos, badges, over seam printing and foiling in abstract patterns and fonts making the opposites attract.

SCREEN-PRINTING

To understand the time and care that is taken into each silk screen printed job, we thought it would be helpful to indicate what happens each time a job is printed.

The first step is artwork. Once the artwork is finalised, it gets sent for processing. From there, and from your printing instructions, your printer will come up with a composite proof for you so you can see what your design will look like on the tees (or polos sweatshirts or other garments). This will confirm the specific print locations you have instructed to print. After the art has been approved, then film is output to make the screens. All of the art is then pre-registered and checked for detail and quality.

The first step in the screen department is to coat the screens with a photosensitive emulsion. Next, the screen dries, and it is placed on the vacuum light table and exposed to a 3000 watt metal halide light. After being exposed the screens are then washed out with a pressure washer at around 1300 psi. Once the image is washed out, it is double checked with the films for accuracy. Each colour in a design needs a screen and each screen must be blocked, taped, setup, and squeegeed.

Just imagine if we had to do this each time a t-shirt was ordered. You can see why screen printing was designed to print quality in bulk. For larger runs with more colours, an automatic machine with 10-18 heads is more practical. By “flashing” or drying the ink between each colour layer, a bright, professional quality print, with years of wear and tear is achievable.

MACHINE EMBROIDERY

A term that describes a specially designed, computerised, embroidery or sewing-embroidery machine to automatically create a design from a pre-made pattern that is input into the machine. In 1980, the first computer graphics embroidery design system was introduced, running on a mini-computer. Technology was enhanced in 1982 with the introduction of the first multi-user system that allowed more than one person to be working on a different part of the embroidery process, vastly streamlining production times. Computerised machine embroidery has rapidly grown in popularity since the late 1990s.

Design Files or ‘Masters’ are typically downloaded to a computer and then transferred to an embroidery machine which can then be used to stitch out the embroidery designs.

SUBLIMATION

The basic dye sublimation process uses special heat-sensitive dyes to print graphics and text onto special transfer paper. The paper is then placed on a 100% polyester item and both are placed into a heat press. When the heating cycle is completed, the image on the paper has been transferred to the item and has actually reformed into or underneath the coated surface. Sublimation is always done on a polyester, polymer, or polymer-coated item. At high temperatures, the solid dye converts into a gas without ever becoming a liquid. The same high temperature opens the pores of the polymer and allows the gas to enter. When the temperature drops, the pores close and the gas reverts to a solid state. It has now become a part of the polymer. This is why dye sublimation can't be done on natural materials, such as 100% cotton. Natural fibres and non-coated materials have no “pores” to open.

A dye impregnates colour into (not on to) a material and this colour change is permanent. Sublimation refers to changes from the solid, to the gaseous state without becoming liquid. A polymer consists of large molecules made up of a linked series of repeated simple molecules. Dye sublimation refers to solid dye particles that are changed into gas using heat and pressure, which then bond with any polymers present and change back into a solid. This means the composition of the polymer has changed, and no fading, cracking or peeling should occur because the colour is now part of the fabric.

The fluid stored in the inkjet cartridge is the carrier of the dye. The carrier stays on the paper and only the dye migrates from the paper to the substrate. The dye has little or no colour until heated, so what you see on the paper usually looks nothing like the final transferred image. Dark materials cannot be used with the sublimation process on made up garments.

Garments decorated with a dye sublimation transfer cannot be removed like images on shirts decorated with screen printing. It is important to remember that this is not ink sitting on top of the fabric, but rather dye that penetrates the fibre of the fabric. The dye particles are designed to bond with polyester, and ignore everything else.

COLOURS

We dye our fabrics to best match the international colour pallet referred to as PMS. The Pantone® Matching System (PMS) is a standardised colour matching system that utilises the Pantone® numbering system for identifying colours in both textile dyes and inks.

By standardising these colours, different manufacturers in different locations or even countries can all reference a Pantone® numbered colour, making sure colours match.

The most commonly referenced colours are in the Pantone® solids palette.

The Pantone® Solid palette consists of 1,114 colours, identified by three or four digit numbers, followed by a C, U, or M suffix.

Originally designed for the graphics industry, the Pantone® solids palette is now used by a wide range of industries, and is the most commonly used palette.

For example, Pantone 199 Red can be identified as Pantone 199C (C= Coated Paper), Pantone 199U (U= Uncoated Paper) or Pantone 199M (M=Matte Paper).

So, when you say Red you could mean any number of shades.

Every good Screen Print Company uses an ink mixing system that corresponds with the Pantone® Matching System (PMS).

Despite the exact nature of Pantone® colours, what you see is not always what you get when screen printing on textiles and PMS 'Fan' Books come in coated and uncoated versions.

Textiles do not come in coated and uncoated versions so C (or coated colours) are the best match for screen printing. Standard plastisol screen print ink has little shine by nature and more closely resembles the look of the coated PMS Colours.

Screen printing on dark garments requires an underbase so the true colour of the ink can be seen vibrantly because without an underbase the ink colours are absorbed by the garment.

An underbase is a layer of white ink before the design colours are printed and some lighter garments can be printed with no underbase depending on the colour of the garment and the ink colour.
